Glad to be in good old St. Louis

I heard President's speech on Aug. 16, 1945,

We have been through the most momentous period in the history of the world. 21 days after I became President, Germany surrendered unconditionally, 4 months and 21 days after I was sworn in as President. Japan folded up and surrendered unconditionally, thus ending the greatest war in the history of the world.

The first and one of my greatest decisions—made minutes after I was sworn in—to order the United Nations Conference to meet in San Francisco on April 26th.

Four days after Japan surrendered I sent my first policy message to Congress. That message contained 21 points based on the Tehran Platform of 1943, which had helped to unite.

When that message went to Congress
the screen campaign on your President started in all its vile and untruthful slanted headlines, columns, and editorials.
Here's character assassins and newspaper columnists and radio commentators. Not because they believed anything they said or wrote but because they were paid to do it.
In January 1946 I repeated what I thought the government should do and I repeated it time and again. The satire and the character assassins did a better job than they intended. They elected the 80th Democratic Republican Congress. Then the issues were clearly drawn.
These traveled up and down this great nation 7,000 miles since the campaign started 9,100 miles.
before it started telling the people about their interests.

Farmers, grain speculators
